

From building national emergency response tools to empowering young environmental leaders and cleaning up waste around one of Latin America's busiest airports, these efforts are ...

From this October until 2027, Panama will host eleven environmental summits and forums, most of them organized by the UN in preparation for COP17--which will be held next year in ...

Panama is carbon-negative because its rainforests absorb more CO2 than its economy emits. Despite efforts to preserve its trees, it has suffered from the effects of climate change.

While its rapid development and economic growth have raised environmental concerns, there is a growing movement towards sustainability. Expats, businesses, and local communities all ...

Panama reaffirms its commitment to remaining a carbon-negative country and achieving net-negative emissions by 2050, linking climate action with economic competitiveness and sustainable development.

Comprehensive commitment to address in a synergistic and ambitious manner the environmental challenges faced by the country in terms of climate change, biodiversity and desertification.

Recently, some good news for the natural world has come out of the isthmus. Here's how Panama is becoming more eco-friendly.

Panama is at a critical moment. Increasing pressure on its water sources, declining food quality, accelerated soil degradation, and the vulnerability of its coastlines intersect with the growing ...

While its rapid development and economic growth have raised ...

Panama launches landmark Nature Pledge integrating climate, biodiversity, and land policies across all government levels. UNFCCC, Global Resilience Partners, and private sector ...

Sustainable tourism is a holistic type of tourism that includes environmental, socio-cultural, economic and political aspects. Panama has a Master Plan for Sustainable Tourism 2020 ...

Web: <https://scmindustries.co.za>